

THE BAIS HAVAAD

HALACHA JOURNAL

Family, Business, and Jewish Life through the Prism of Halacha

VOLUME 5781 · ISSUE LXXIII · PARSHAS KI SAVO

CODE OF ARMS: WEAPONS IN HALACHA

Adapted from the writings of Dayan Yitzhak Grossman

Shmuel Silverberg, a nineteen-year-old yeshiva student, was fatally shot last week in front of Yeshiva Toras Chaim in Denver, in the culmination of a crime spree that included two carjackings and another shooting that left a victim critically injured.¹ There have been a number of high-profile murders of Jews in the United States in recent years, including Pittsburgh, Poway, and Jersey City, as well as numerous acts of non-lethal assault and vandalism.² This author has heard that some Orthodox Jews have begun carrying firearms for protection. In this article, we explore various Torah perspectives on the bearing of arms for self-defense.

WEAPONS: REPREHENSIBLE OR ORNAMENTAL?

The Mishnah records a dispute about whether one who bears arms in a public domain on Shabbos is liable to bring a sin offering. R' Eliezer maintains that the weapons are ornaments for him, so the bearer is not liable,³ while the other sages maintain that he is liable, because:

[Weapons] are nothing other than reprehensible, as it is written: "And they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation will not raise sword against nation, neither will they learn war anymore."⁴

In a braisa cited by the Gemara, R' Eliezer defends his position by explaining that although weapons are currently ornamental, they will nevertheless be eliminated in the Messianic era

(continued on page 2)

³ Me'iri implies that R' Eliezer nevertheless prohibits bearing them lechatchilah, and this is the explicit position of Magein Avraham siman 301 s.k. 27. Melech Shlomo is uncertain about this. R' Prachiah ben Nissim interprets R' Eliezer to permit bearing arms even lechatchilah, but he understands that the Mishnah actually records two different dissenting views: one that merely forbids the practice, and one that maintains that it engenders sin-offering liability. Cf. Machatzis Hashekel ibid.; R' David Lau, Tilul Kli Neshek BeShabbos.

⁴ Shabbos 6:4.

A PUBLICATION OF THE
BAIS HAVAAD HALACHA CENTER
105 River Ave. #301, Lakewood NJ 08701
1.888.485.VAAD (8223)
www.baishavaad.org
info@baishavaad.org
Lakewood • Midwest • Brooklyn • South Florida

לע"נ הרב יוסף ישראל
ב"ר משה גרוסמן זצ"ל

Dedicated in loving memory of
HaRav Yosef Grossman zt"l

PARSHAS KI SAVO MONEY ORDER

Excerpted and adapted from a shiur by
Rav Yaakov Meir Levi

When you have finished giving all the tithes of your produce in the third year, the year of the tithe, you shall give [them] to the levi, the stranger, the orphan, and the widow, so that they may eat in your cities and be satisfied.

Devarim 26:12

Chazal derive from this mitzvah of ma'aser ani and other psukim that everyone is obligated in the mitzvah of tzedakah. Although the absolute minimum one must give is a third of a shekel per year, he must give a sum commensurate with his earnings. If he does not have sufficient money for his own household, it takes precedence over others.

There is a halachic hierarchy among tzedakah recipients. For example, relatives take precedence over others. If similar-degree relatives are in need of financial assistance, such as a brother and sister, women are usually given precedence, because it is more embarrassing for a woman to collect door-to-door than for a man.

(continued on page 2)

Service Elevator

Q Our daughter is engaged, and her chassan is coming this Shabbos for the meals. May she serve him his food?

A Until they marry, the chassan and kallah are arayos to one another just like strangers, so the halachos of arayos apply. The Bais Shmuel (E.H. 21:9) explains the Rama to hold that a woman that is an ervah to a man may not place his food directly in front of him, and vice versa. The Eretz Tzvi, cited by Otzar

(continued on page 2)

Q&A from the
BAIS HAVAAD
HALACHA HOTLINE
1.888.485.VAAD(8223)
ask@baishavaad.org

(continued from page 1)

because they will become unnecessary, and they will thus no longer have even an ornamental function, just as “a candle in the afternoon” does not.

The Gemara proceeds with an alternative explanation of R' Eliezer's view: He maintains that even in the Messianic era, weapons will not be eliminated, in line with the opinion of Shmuel that “the only difference between this world and the Messianic era is subjugation of the governments,” i.e., society will not change, and wars will continue to be waged.

The Gemara concludes its discussion by adducing a source for R' Eliezer's position that weapons are considered ornaments from a pasuk in Tehillim: “Gird your sword upon your thigh, mighty one, your glory and your splendor.”⁵⁶

We have, then, a fundamental dispute regarding the Torah's attitude toward weapons: R' Eliezer considers them ornaments, at least in the non-Messianic world, but the other sages consider them reprehensible, a necessary evil, and thus presumably something to avoid unless absolutely necessary.

According to R' Avraham Yitzchak Hakohen Kook, R' Eliezer's position is that even in our non-Messianic world, the purpose of weapons is not to spill blood, but on the contrary, to maintain peace via deterrence and a balance of power, which are necessary in our era, in which international “opposition” (nigud) is essential and productive for social development. This positive function of weapons is what makes them considered ornaments.⁷

MUKTZEH

Although the halacha does not follow the view of R' Eliezer,⁸ Rav Kook's perspective that a weapon's primary function is deterrence rather than shooting arises in a different context: the muktzeh status of firearms. Some poskim maintain that a firearm is muktzeh as a kli shemelachto le'issur (a utensil whose function is prohibited on Shabbos), because its primary function is to be fired,⁹ but the Shmiras Shabbos Kehilchasah quotes R' Shlomo Zalman Auerbach as stating that:

It seems that [carrying] a rifle or pistol in order to cause fear is actually considered tzorech gufo (handling an item for the purpose of making use of it, which is permitted for a kli shemelachto le'issur) (and it seems that not during wartime, most of their utilization is merely to intimidate).¹⁰

Rav Auerbach seems to be saying that a firearm is actually a kli shemelachto le'heteir, because outside of wartime, its primary function is deterrence rather than shooting.

Similarly, the Klausenberger Rebbe initially assumes that a firearm is a *kli shemelachto le'issur*¹¹ and cites various Acharonim who so categorize weapons like swords,¹² but he ultimately concludes that “in our times, when most of those who bear arms do so only to impose fear, and on the contrary are prohibited from using them,” a weapon may be characterized as a kli shemelachto le'issur uleheteir, which has the same status as a kli shemelachto le'heteir.¹³

HOTZA'AH

Returning to the Gemara's question of carrying weapons on Shabbos, the Or Zarua rules that when there is fear and rumor of impending enemy attack, it is permitted to carry weapons “to guard and to make a commotion in the city” in order to forestall the attack, because “we are not meticulous regarding pikuach nefesh.”¹⁴ It is difficult to establish, however, how substantial the danger must be in order to qualify as pikuach nefesh.

Over the past century, many poskim have considered the permissibility of carrying weapons on Shabbos, in various circumstances of ne-

9 See R' Gil Student, Guns on Shabbos, Hirkurim-Musings.

10 Shmiras Shabbos Kehilchasah (new edition) Ch. 20 n. 29 p. 298.

11 Shu"t Divrei Yatziv O.C. cheilek 1 siman 148 os 1.

12 Shu"t Zera Emes cheilek 3 siman 24 sv. Tshuvah; Mishneh Lechem (Emden, second edition of Lechem Mishneh) Shabbos ibid.

13 Divrei Yatziv ibid. end of os 4.

14 Or Zarua ibid. This ruling is codified by the Rama in O.C. 329:6.

5 Tehillim 45:4.
6 Shabbos 63a. See Shu"t Igros Moshe O.C. cheilek 4 siman 81.
7 Ein Ayah ibid.
8 Rambam Hilchos Shabbos 19:1; Or Zarua Hilchos Shabbos siman 94 os 13; Tur O.C. siman 301.

(continued from page 1)

Precedence also depends upon the need. If two similar relatives require tzedakah, but one needs food and the other clothing, food takes precedence. But relatives take precedence over others even if the non-relative needs food and the relative only clothing.

Aniyei ircha, the poor of one's own city, come before outsiders. (One who has lived in a city for at least twelve months is considered a local for this purpose.) The poor of Eretz Yisrael take precedence over other outsiders, but not over aniyei ircha. And the

(continued from page 1)

Haposkim (ibid.), understands the Rama differently and permits it. The poskim appear to side with the Bais Shmuel.

DAYAN YEHOASHUA GRUNWALD

How then, you may wonder, may a housewife serve any guest? Numerous answers are offered. One, cited by the Eizer Mikodesh, is that this prohibition, like yichud, is inapplicable when others are present. Others say that the primary basis to permit this practice is the argument of the Aruch Hashulchan that since the housewife is obligated to serve her guests, the activity is like avdus and will not lead to aveirah. (Notably, the Aruch Hashulchan also permits it in the case of ishto nidah for the same reason, but common custom doesn't follow that ruling.) Another view cited by the Eizer Mikodesh is that it is in fact permitted only when the guest's wife is with him, just as the issur yichud doesn't apply under those circumstances.

In your case, the kallah would not be serving her chassan simply because he is a guest in the home, and the chassan doesn't yet have a wife, so only the first view would permit her to serve him. Additionally, the Eizer Mikodesh writes that even when a heteir is applicable, it is probably still a midas chassidus to serve the food with a shinui, such as not placing it directly in front of him or using one's left hand. (See also Chut Shani Shabbos Vol. 3 pg. 276 and Om Ani Chomah Vol. 1 p. 109.)

cessity and danger;¹⁵ analysis of their rulings and the numerous halachic questions involved is beyond the scope of this article.

15 Shu"t Zeicher Simcha (Bamberger) siman 35; Shu"t Chelkas Yaakov O.C. siman 96; Divrei Yatziv ibid.; R' Avraham Avidan, Tiltul Dvarim Chiyuni'im Lelo Eiruv, Techumin Vol. 4 from p. 227; R' Re'em Hakohen, Tiltul Batzava, ibid. from p. 234 (the latter two sources are cited by Rav Lau in n. 20 of his article); Rav Lau ibid.; R' Chaim Eisenstein, Halacha from the Daily Daf: Shabbos 63—Can a soldier carry his gun on Shabbos even when there is no danger?

SILVER FAMILY THERAPY AGENCY Care

BHHJ SPONSORS
Refuah Healthshare

To become a corporate sponsor of the BHHJ or disseminate in memory/zechus of a loved one, email info@baishavaad.org

Scan here to receive the weekly email version of the Halacha Journal or sign up at www.baishavaad.org/subscribe

Elevate your Inbox.

